PH.D. PROGRAM: ACADEMIC POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

I. LEARNING OUTCOMES twoadditional f eldsof economics and be able to analyze and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a level consistent with the state of the art in those f elds.
two additional f elds of economics and be able to analyze and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a	I. LEARNING OUTCOMES and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a
and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a	two additional felds of economics and be able to analyze
	and understand the issues in their chosen f elds at a level consistent with the state of the art in those fields.
Page 1

than the May of ering of their second year. Therequired courses for each f eld comprehensive exam of Graduate, Research, or Teaching Assistantships or Teaching Fellowships and will have to cover their own to complete the degree. However, f nancial support is subject to a budget constraint. Our f rst commitment is

Students receiving f nancial aid from the department as a GA, TA or TF are prohibited from accepting a second

IV. Advisement

Fourth, the sooner you develop such a proposal, voluminous early empirical f ndings, but is not sure

And last, the more organized the early stages of your dis thoughts; but pragmatically, one has to f nish!

Statement of the problem f cient detail to bring the reader unfamiliar with this

Review of the literature concise

be able to build upon and extend the frontier of the feld. Plan of research